

ChatGPT Version 5.3

May 2, 2026

I am working on a different document from the Archive of the Crown of Aragon, also from 1387, about Bartolomeo Sirvent, the secretary of Queen Violant de Bar. I would like to know if there have been any journal articles or monographs, published by academic presses, that have contained biographical information about Bartolomeo Sirvent. Please do a search for information about Bartolomeo Sirvent and provide links to any sources you find.

I'll treat "Bartolomeo Sirvent" as potentially appearing under Catalan/Latin/Italian variants, especially Bartomeu/Bartolomeu/Berthomeu Sirvent/Servent/Sirventi, and will look for academic or source-based references rather than general web mentions.

Thought for 1m 18s

I found no standalone modern biography of Bartolomeo/Bartomeu Sirvent, but I did find several scholarly references that give useful biographical data. The key search variant is Bartomeu Sirvent; Latin documentary forms include Bartholomeus Sirvent and spellings such as B. Servent.

Most useful findings

1. Isabel Grifoll, "Auctoritas i Utilitas pública de la poesia," RiMe 16/1 (2016).

This is the best single source I found for compact biographical information. Grifoll identifies Sirvent as part of the late-fourteenth-century chancery reform, says the essential manuscript for him is Biblioteca Colombina, ms. 7-3-17, containing correspondence between Sirvent and other chancery secretaries, and summarizes his career: he succeeded Bernat Miquel as Joan I's trusted chancery man, probably in 1381; he was also secretary of Violant de Bar; he handled Latin correspondence for both chancelleries; he became protonotary in 1395; and after Joan I's death he continued briefly under Martí I, with the last known datum around 1400. Grifoll also cites Marçal Olivar's earlier edition of Sirvent-related letters and Francisco Rico on the limits of Sirvent's "humanism."

2. Marçal Olivar, "Notes entorn la influència de l'Ars dictandi sobre la prosa catalana de cancelleria de finals del segle XIV: El ms. Y-129-7 de la Biblioteca Colombina," Estudis Universitaris Catalans 22 (1936), pp. 631–653.

This appears to be the foundational article for Sirvent's Latin epistolary circle. I did not locate a full open scan of the article itself, but it is repeatedly cited as publishing the correspondence in the Colombina manuscript associated with Sirvent, Pere Guitard, Pere Margall, and Pere de Beviure. Google Books has a bibliographic entry for it, and Grifoll gives the full citation and calls the manuscript "imprescindible" for Sirvent.

3. Gran Enciclopèdia Catalana, "Bartomeu Sirvent."

Not a journal article, but useful as a concise reference entry. It says he was a high royal official; second secretary of Pere III at least from 1371; first secretary by 1382, succeeding Bernat Miquel; after Pere's death in 1387, secretary of the queen; protonotary of Joan I by 1395; one of those implicated in the process against Joan I's council; later served Martí I; and was succeeded by Guillem Ponç.

4. Laia Ruiz Domingo, "Surrounding the Future Queen of the Crown of Aragon: Violant of Bar's Household as Duchess of Girona (1384–1386)," Royal Studies Journal 10, no. 1 (2023).

This article is not primarily about Sirvent, and for Violant's ducal household it emphasizes Pere de Benviure as secretary to the duke and duchess. But it does cite an ACA letter with the chancery note "Barthomeu Sirvent. Domina regina mandavit mihi," showing Sirvent in the documentary environment around royal/queenly correspondence.

5. Maria Teresa Ferrer i Mallol, "Un mercader italià a la cort catalanoaragonesa: Luchino Scarampi," Acta Historica et Archaeologica Mediaevalia 31 (2014).

This is useful for placing Sirvent within Joan I's and Martí I's administrative milieu. It mentions Bartomeu Sirvent, protonotari reial, acting with Miquel Roure and others in a 1391 financial/court document. It is not biographical in itself, but it corroborates his protonotarial/administrative role in the same courtly networks you are studying.

6. Albert Reixach / Histoire urbaine material on social mobility and service to the Crown.

A recent article cites Reixach's Institutions locals i elits for examples including Bartomeu Sirvent, and a related searchable snippet from Reixach's work calls him an escrivà of Gironese origins connected to the royal court or the household of the infante Joan. This may be worth tracking down if you want Sirvent's family/origin/social-mobility context.

Working biographical sketch from the sources

Bartomeu Sirvent was a royal chancery professional active from at least the 1370s into the end of the fourteenth century. He served Pere III, rose to a senior secretarial position by the early 1380s, became closely associated with Joan I's chancery, and was also secretary of Queen Violant de Bar. He was important enough in Latin documentary culture that later scholarship treats him as one of the leading figures in the reform of chancery dictamen and in the learned, quasi-humanist epistolary culture around Joan I's court. By 1395 he was protonotary, and he remained briefly in service under Martí I. The best archival-literary lead is Biblioteca Colombina, Sevilla, ms. 7-3-17 / formerly Y-129-7, especially as published or discussed by Marçal Olivar.