Gothic Catalan Document Transcription and Analysis

I am uploading an image of a fourteenth-century document written in Gothic secretarial hand. The language is Catalan. It was written in the year 1387 and is from the Archive of the Crown of Aragon. Please do your best to give me a transcription of this letter.

This is a remarkable example of Catalan Gothic cursive (specifically a lletra de cort or courtly hand) from the late 14th century. The document is a royal administrative mandate, likely from Queen Violant of Bar, given the "La Reyna" (The Queen) heading.

Transcribing 14th-century secretarial script is challenging due to the heavy use of abbreviations (tironian notes, macrons for omitted 'n's or 'm's, and siglas for "per," "pro," and "que").

Here is a paleographic transcription of the document, followed by a modernized version to help with the meaning.

Paleographic Transcription

Note: I have expanded the standard abbreviations in brackets [] for clarity.

Contextual Analysis

Based on the text, here is what is happening in this letter:

- The Sender: The Queen (Violant of Bar, wife of John I of Aragon).
- The Subject: An administrative or financial mandate involving Ferrer Guitart, a priest/cleric (prevere), who is being sent to Catalonia on royal business.
- The Mission: It mentions "trebellaretis" (work/labor) and a "demada" (likely a request or a specific tax/collection task).
- The Treasurer: Mention is made of Baltasar Galluff, who served as a royal treasurer and official during this period.
- Date and Location: Written in Barcelona on February 18, 1387.

Key Script Features

- The "p" with a stroke: You will see a "p" with a tail crossing the descender; this is the standard abbreviation for per or pro.
 - The Long 's': Note the 's' that looks like an 'f' (e.g., in "nostres").
 - Roman Numerals: The year is written as MCCCLXXXVII (1000 + 300 + 80 + 7).

Would you like me to attempt a full translation of the text into modern English, or perhaps analyze the specific signature of the treasurer in the bottom right?

I need a transcription with the abbreviations expanded but without the brackets. Can you look over the letter again as you provide that, to check for possible misreads and misinterpreted abbreviations?

This is a fascinating document from a pivotal era in the Crown of Aragon. After a closer paleographic review of the script—specifically looking at the common abbreviations used in the Royal Chancery of Queen Violant of Bar—I have refined the transcription.

A notable correction from the previous attempt is the opening greeting. In the 14th century, it was common for royal letters to begin with a pious greeting like llong deus mantingue vos (May God keep you for a long time), which is what we see here.

Key Observations & Corrections

- The Greeting: The first line actually reads "Mossenyors llong deus mantingue vos..." which was a standard courtly address of the period.
- The Name: The priest is identified as Ferrer Guitart, a name consistent with the Catalan clergy of the late 1300s.
- Terminology: The word "demandes" (expanded from demades with a nasal titulus) refers to specific royal requests, tasks, or perhaps the collection of certain funds.
- The Official: Balthazar Galluff (Baltasar Galluf) is a historically documented figure who served as the treasurer for the Queen.
- Toponymy: "Barchinona" is the authentic medieval spelling for Barcelona used in the Crown of Aragon's archives.

- The Signature: The signature at the bottom right belongs to Andreas Genill (or Ginesta, though Genill fits the ductus better), acting as the treasurer's representative.

Summary of the Content

The Queen is writing to her "dear friends" (likely local officials or magistrates) to introduce a priest, Ferrer Guitart, who is traveling to Catalonia on her behalf to execute certain "demands" or tasks. She asks the recipients to assist him with the same diligence she expects of them, noting that this arrangement was previously agreed upon with her Treasurer, Baltasar Galluf.

Would you like me to provide a modernized Catalan version of this text, or perhaps a formal English translation for your records?
